Largest Class Enrolled at College of Pharmacy

The Class of 2013 at the University of Georgia College of Pharmacy has a record number of 138 students enrolled in the four-year Doctor of Pharmacy curriculum. They are also the first pharmacy students to begin their academic careers in the new 93,288 square foot Pharmacy South addition.

The new class, which is 62 percent female, has a 3.64 grade point average and an average Pharmacy College Admission Test (PCAT) composite score in the 83rd percentile.

Minorities represent 26 percent of the class; one percent are out-of-state students and 26 percent have a previous bachelor of science degree or higher.

The beginning of their pharmacy careers was commemorated with a White Coat ceremony where each student received a white lab coat as a symbol of entry into the pharmacy profession. The annual ceremony featured Neil Wohlford ('95), president of the College's Alumni Council, as keynote speaker. Alumnus Rick Allen ('74), deputy director of Georgia Drugs and Narcotics Agency, gave opening remarks and was among the five members of the College's Alumni Council to welcome the incoming students. Kroger Pharmacy sponsored the event.
